The death of her hasband, killed in action, afforded her an opportunity of avenging him and of rising another step. The French defeat at Guadalnpe on the th of May, 1862, obtained for her the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, second in command of a regiment, in which position she again greatly distinguished herself during the siego of Puebla. This singular woman handles the sword like a first-rate fencing master, and she made herself not only respected but feared by her soldiers, who looked npon her as a snpernatural being. |Correspondence of the Louisville Journal.] FROM BOSECRANS' ADVANCE.

STEVENSON, ALA., Ang. 29, 1863. At last we confront the enemy on the line f the Tennessee. It has been his honst for a ong time that if the abandonment of Tullanoma and other points between there and here accame necessary, rallying every able-bodied southron for a final stringele, he would hurl across the river defiance at our "invading nordes," and welcome the Union armies "with bloody hands to hospitable graves."

Our advance was an arduous and tsdious one. Obstacles that appeared almost insurmountable were overcome; an immanse area of country was traversed; and this powerful Coloscus, moved by the hand of an accomplished leader, found itself within sight of the enemy's camp fires. Our line is an extended one, reaching from Pikeville on the northeast. to Larkinsville on the south, a distance of about one hundred and fifty miles. Every point of importance from right to left is known and fully understoed by the General, who has himself ridden on horseback almost the entire hundred of the line increases. ength of the line inspecting works, selecting oints of crossing, and frequently directing he labors of the workmen.

The vigilance of our cavalry that guard the finnks is such as to render sudden forays on our line a hazardons undertaking on the part of the enemy, and while our pickets closely watch the rebels that hold the opposite bank of the Tennessee, all the forces necessary to an early completion of the work are preparing pontoons, repairing wagons, and putting every thing in readiness for crossing the river and climbing the steep, rough mountains on the

To any one who has seen these declivitous FROM THE ARMY OF THE CUMBERLAND slopes, only accessible by the narrow defiles that the rebel artillery already guards, the work of throwing over an army as great as this cannot but be regarded as a perilous and arduons one. The mind that plans and the arduons one. The mind that plans and the mighty mass of men and baggage has this work to do, and when the co-operation of other forces that are not at present in full com-nunication with us dictates, the task will be in course of accomplishment.

The Chicago Evening Journal, in publishing a full and tolerably accurate report of the direction taken by our troops, after breaking camp at Winchester, has given to the public, gnorantly of course, just what all reporters were charged not to publish, a statement of ne position of our troops on the Tennessee. and General Buroside arrived within co-perating distance as the same time our army sached the Tennessee the report published in ne Journal could not have heen detrimental. But, not content with this, the Journal's eporter divulges a portion of the General's esigns, and notifies the public that our forces designs, and notifies the public that our forces on the right will be pushed rapidly across the country, through Northwestern Georgia, to Rome, when Brsgg, frightened by the appearance of a flanking army under Burnside, shall retire his army in that direction. The policy that would dictate a relinquishment on the part of Bragg of his present base, without risking an engagement in an attempt to hold it, I cannot understand. Rome, it is true, is an important point, having for a long time heen the principal depot of the Confederacy for the manulacture of arms and manitions of war. The machinery thers could not be of war. The machinery thers could not be ransported to another point and put into operation as rapidly as would comport with the nterests of the rebel service, and hence it will be an object to Bragg to put forth every exer-ion to defend it. Fortifications have been rected, and an immense amount of labor and skill employed in the effort to render it impregnable. The fut lity of the effort is evilent n theso facts: First, the place is as readily secure a line of retreat. The town is situated on the north side of Etowah river, just in the angle at the confluence of that stream, and the Oostanania.

In case of a retreat becoming necessary, pentoons should be in readiness, and they would be in constant danger of destruction by your artillery or sudden dealers of our extension. cur artillery, or sudden dashes of our enter-prising mounted forces. Secondly, our long range guns, equal in capacity to anything in possession of the enemy, and worked with a precision that cannot be excelled, could level the city, while the enemy's works were en-tirely ignored. To defend Rome, therefore, the line of the Tennessee must not be abanlanked as Chattanooga, and affords not half

Bragg occupies at present the most dofensiole pusition possible for him to obtain. The ords and defiles along the river, defended as tween here and Atlanta.

Chattanooga has been carefully fortified. Eight splendid carthworks can be plainly seen on the south side of the city, besides n contin-uous line of rifle-pits that command the ap-proach to the place. The river is not easily bridged, and the superior advantages of the rebels, who have selected their own points of defence, and the withering fire that can be ponred down upon the crossing forces, dictate, appears to me, an attempt on the enemy's nrt to hold their present base.
The "Holson (Tenn.) Telegraph" failed, it seems, to suggest the programme that Gen.

Rosecrans would adopt in the prosecution of the campaign. It looked for the appearance of a Federal column in East Tennessee from the Army of the Cumberland, by way of the Army of the Cumberland, by way of Spaita, and the occupation of Knoxville, never dreaming, apparently, that Burnside would do that work and enable Rosecrans to advance with his army intact. The advanced column of Burnside's army has already appeared at Kingston and communication has been opened with him by courier. I presume that not many days will pass erre the great movement. many days will pass ere the grand movement of the two armies will have begun. I am induced to believe, from the meagre drippings of the official conservatory that I have harbored, that a portion of the co-operating army has been delayed in East Tennessee, and that Buckner has not yet been definitely or satis-

The work of preparing boats along the river for the construction of pontoons progresses admirably. The General a quarters hourly swarm with informants, and their reports, totime for "citium cum dignitate."

Immediately after the occupation of this side of the river by our pickets an armistice by mutual consent was declared, and while both parties retained their positions merely in performance of legitimate picket duty, no advantage was to be taken by either of the exposure of persons to fire. The arrangement was a pleasant one and satisfactory to both, since both parties bathed in the river without darger of injury, exchanged newspapers, and held lengthy chats while enjoying the luxury of a bath. A few evenings since, General Rosecrans, accompanied by his staff and a fow friends, ran down to Bridgeport on the train and repaired to the bank of the river to hear the conversations between the pickets. A malicionaly disposed miscreant who command the rebel pickets discovered the party, and, though cognizant of the existing arrangement referred to, ordered his men to fire. The pick-et opposite, averse to such a hase and perfidious et opposite, averse to such a hase and perholious violation of the trnce, before obeying the order, stepped out from his shelter and hallooed across, "Look ont boys, we have orders to fire now." And in another moment a ball had whistled past the ear of the General's son and buried itself in an adjacent tree. The General is constantly incurring such daugers, and though the advantage accruing from a personal knowledge of situations is

CAMP IN SEQUATORIE VALLEY, TENN., August 22, 1863. August 22, 1863. Gen. Hszen returned this morning from the banks of the Tennessee. He paid his compliments to this rehistationed et Harrisou's Landing by way of a few shells, which he dropped among them. Wilder, also, changed shots in front of Chattanooga, hut more than this Wilder had the good fortune to capture a small forage train belonging to the enemy, also forty forage train belonging to the enemy, also forty prisoners, and a small herd of beet cattle. It is also reported that our forces have been feeling the enemy from Bridgeport. Surmises are floating round the camp quite thickly, some avowing that the rehs have evacuated Chattanooga, and others that they are being einforced by Johnston and his command. () course we know nothing definitely, as we are fully thirty miles from the river, yet it is probable that we will be allowed to be in at the

Our camp is full of life. The men are singing and enjoying themselves in various ways. The violin, the flute, the fife, and the bugle may be heard in our camp almost any moment between retreat and tattoo. The weather is so intensely warm that the men are very glad to take shelter in their little deg-tents during the day from the fierce rays of the snn. A great many citizens visit onr camp every day. All of them profess to be Union men, though some of them acknowledge they have been in the rebel army, but plead in extenuation that they were forced into the ranks against their will. Others profess to he refugees who have been hid in the mountains to avoid the conscription. Some have sad stories to tell of persecution and oppression. From one I learned the par-ticulars of the death of the Rey. Mr. Blair, ticulars of the death of the Rev, Mr. Blair, for many years a prominent Baptist minister in this county. It appears that Mr. Blair, although a Northern man and a slaveholder, was still a lover of his country and a Union man. In order, however, to assure himself that our Government did not intend to trespass upon the rights of the South ho visited Kentucky, where he saw for himself the workings of the government. He had but just returned from his visit to that State when he was waited upon by a roving conscription party, who wiched by a roving conscription party, who wished him to enter the Southern army. He replied firmly and manfully: "I would rather die than light against my government." The officer asked him if that was his final answer. He replied that it was. "Then die," said the officer, as he levelled his revolver and hiew his haring out. This broad answer is bra'ns out. This brutal murder occurred in the house of the deceased, with his family as witnesses. Was ever a more dastardly deed committed by mortal man? I would rather make my bed upon the better the committed by mortal man? I would rather the what they may desire to purchase. n the infernal regions than live accursed by the torments of that fiendis officer's conscience, and yet there are persons who will defend such conduct, ay, in my own loved Kentucky there are those who can always and come extenuating circumstance to defend chel murders and hushwhackers. Of this latter class I would say oue word. A bush-whacker is a murderer. The man who lays concealed in the fence corner and awaits the approach of a fellow mortal that he may shoot him down is no more or less than a cold-blooded murderer. No war can legalize such murder. No public opinion can make it honorable and no mand an make it honorable and no mand no make accounted to the down the orable, and no man, save a cownrd who dare oranic, and no man, save a cownrd who dare not face an armed fos, would he guilty of such fiendish cruelty. Young ladies who sympathize with the South may smile upon these fiezds, and encourage them in such ruelty: but whenever they do so they are encouraging murder, and will be held to a strict accountability before God's throne for or gentleman may be forgiven for admiring a brave man who is willing to risk his life in open combat in defence of his principles, but with what a feeling of abhorrence and conimplimited all bonorable persons regard those platuated creatures who so far forget themselves as to defend murder and murderers.

This is to enjoy in the midst of society that solitude which poets have sung o', and which Cowper makes Selkirk rail ngainst.

STREET FIGHT AT FRANKFORT.

Faankfoat, Ky., Sept. 4, 1863. Our usually very quiet little city was this merning thrown from its propriety, for a time, by a street fight between a well-known cler-gyman and a "man about town." It seems that, a short time since, the individual made some statements with regard to the clergy-man and a young lady of the city, which was of a character not to be relished by watchful mammas of said clergyman's flock. On heing applied to he gave the divine a writing supposed by the public to have beer a retraction of the statements. This morning they met on the streets in front of the Capitol, when the man who had given the statement asked the preacher to let him see it, and on getting hold of it tore it into small pieces. A quarrel ensued, which scon ripened into a fight, the clergyman commencing by throwing stones at the other, who he fight.

The parties were forthwith arrested and tried for a brench of the peace, the case fully heard, ably argued on all sides, and submitted to a jury, who found both guilty, and fined the pleacher $15 and the other party $19. Much feeling is manifested in the matter, guilty of no more than a slight indiscretion, their names are withheld. "If thine enemy smire thee on the right cheek," &c. "A word

U. S. Shockokon, off Wilmington, N. C.,
Augast 26th.—Sir: I have the honor to report that we have destroyed the blockvde-running schooner "Alex Cooper" under the following circumstances: On the 12th I made a reconnoissance with boats in "New Topsail Inlet" and was driven out by four pieces of Inlet," and was driven out by four pieces of artillery stationed opposite its mouth, but not before I had discovered a schooner at a wharf some six miles up the Sound. The schooner I determined to destroy, and, as it was so well guaried, I concluded to use strategy.

On the evening of the 22d, the "Shockoku" anchored close into the sea-beach, about five miles from the lulet, and I sent ashore two boats' crews, who shouldered the "dingue" and carried it across the neck of land that di-vides the sea from the sound. This way is about half a mile in width and covered with some miles in the rear of the artillery force guarding the entrance. The "dingue" being launched in the inside water, six men under my executive officer, Ensign Jos. J. Cowry, started with orders to destroy or capture anything that could be of use to the enemy

Now it seems that a 12-pounder howitzer was situated at the point for which we were examining, and, the snoke stack of my steamer having been seen over the trees, the commandant of the fort, Capt. Adams, had came down from the main camp to insure a bright lookcut. While the rebels at the schooner's to the South my boat was approaching in ananding about sixty (60) yards from the wharf ithout being discovered.

The Master-at-Arms, Robert Clifford, crept into the rebel camp and counted the men, and baving returned to his shipmates a charge was ordered, and our seamen poured on them with a shout. In a moment the enemy, who ontnumbered us three to one, were routed, leaving in Mr. Cowry's possession ten priva-teers, including Captain Adams and Lieut. Latham, one 12-pounder, an army howitzer, eighteen horses, one schooner, and some ex-tensive salt works. Mr. Cowry then threw fired the vessel and the salt works. These The object of the expedition being accomel officers and privates dress alike, and my men were at a loss what three to retain. They men were at a loss what three to retain. They settled the matter, however, hy picking out the three best-looking ones, who all turned cut to be privates; so the officers owed their safety to their lack of physiognomy—a new feature in military strategy. Whilo this was feature in military strategy. While this was going on at the main land, the pickets on the teach side, under the acting master's mate, found fit to engage and repulse the rebel picket force in that quarter without loss on our Port Royal with an assorted cargo, and was towed cutside the line of blockade by a gunboat. I shall try to learn the names of the patriotic persons, if any, who entered into this little speculation.

RACHEL .- I have had the pleasure of frequently meeting Rachel in society, and cer-tainly it was impossible to have seen any one more high tred in appearance, dress, and manner. There was nothing exaggerated in her style of dress, which was always of rich material, but in perfect taste. She generally, order to conceal the excessive spareness the long, slight throat, and falling in heavy folde; the lace collar being fastened by some costly ornement. Her head, which was beanitully shaped, was generally adorned only hy fer thick, waving hair. Her eyes were very ceply set, and too jet black to he soft and deasing; her profile was regular in its outline, out her tace was long and narrow, and bors vident traces of its Jewish origin. She had very small, well formed hands, with long, thin, tapering fingers, and pink nails, re markably bien soignes. Her manner in a draw ing room was particularly quiet, pleasing, and lady like. She was neither forward nor ser-vile, never forcing herself on any one's acquaintance, and yet never accepting n posi-on of humiliation. I could completely un-derstand how thoroughly English society had been taken in during her first visit to London, and how the most strait-laced downgers had nvited her, almost on a footing of intimacy of their houses and select parties. It is tru that she had not then completely thrown all appearances of propriety to the winds, as in her later career. I think I may say, without bjecting myself to any accusation of scandal or exaggeration, that no woman ever went eyond Rachel in immorality.

I have heard men say that it was just that contrast between her "company" manners, so distinguished, graceful, and dignified, and the coarse rihald tone which she assumed when at ease with her boon companions, that fascinated them. She must have studied vice as another might have studied virtue, and instead of feigning to he cetter than she really was, it seemed to be her glory to show to her admirers the darkest shades of her character and make them kneel down and worship the dol of mud they had set up. I write this now, as a grateful acknowledgment for the al-most inestimable service you have done the country. I wish to say a word further. MONDAY, SEPT. 7, 1863. THE SPEAKERSHIP OF THE NATIONAL HOUSE

OF REPRESENTATIVES .- The Detroit Free Press, the very able organ of the Democracy of Mich-There is some discussion in the papers respecting the selection of a Democratic candidate for the Speakership of the next House of Representativea. Among the rest, the Lonisville Journal, the old Whig organ of Kentucky, suggests the name of the Hon. Mr. Mallory, of that State, who was a member of the last Congress, and has just been also also the last Congress, and has just been also the last Congress. the last Congress, and has just been elected Without wishing or intending to express a choice, or to influence others in their preference for the Speakership, we like the political significance of the recommendation of the Kentucky journal, as it suggests a policy which ought to he wisely considered by all the opponents of the aholition policy of the administration. In the present condition of the istration. In the present condition of the country, the Border State Platform, hy which we meao the platform of the Union men of the order Slave States, looks to he the most feasibelt and practicable ground upon which the Democratic party of the country can unite, and restore peace, nulon, and the constitution to the country. It is plain to see that the Union men of the Border Slave States stand in the hreach hetween the North and the South They are equally opposed to abolition and secession, and they are, by the force both of principle and interest, in favor of the earliest mind. possible peace consistent with the preservation of the Union and the constitution. And what is the Border State policy?

This question our Democratic contemporary of Kentucky at the session of 1862:

in any other mode. The original State organizations, with all their just rights and powers under the Federal Constitution, must be preserved. Hence, Kentucky deplores and condemns, in this great struggle for constitutional liberty, all attempts to abolish or alter, in the least respect, the relative position of any of the States toward each other or the Federal government, and especially does she condemn, in uoqualified terms, any effort to reduce any of the States to a colonial or territorial condi-

Therefore be it further resolved. That our Senators and Representatives to Congress be requested to use all their power and influence to defeat all measures which may be presented to their hody to destroy any of the States, or to deprive them of any of their just powers or rights under the established form of the national government. tional government.

Having made the citations we have mentioned, the Free Press adds:

These sentiments pervade the great Union party, composed of both Democrats and Whigs, In-Missouri, Kentucky, Maryland, and Virginia. Cannot and ought not the patrictic opponents of the Summer-Whiting abolition policy to unite together on the hasis of ents and opinions like those published

To this interrogatory, we answer emphatically: THEY CAN, AND THEY OUGHT TO. And we firmly helieve that they will. We have never heretofore for a moment doubted this result: and certainly we cannot doubt it now when influential Democratic leaders in all quarters of the North are so directly confirming our cherished conviction. One thing at least is certain; and, though we have said it before, we will repeat it, for it cannot he uttered too frequently or too distinctly. Let the great conservative party of the country hut unmistakably plant itself upon the Border State Platform in the Presidential canvass of next year, and the radical party will go down never to rise again, while the Union and the Constitution will rise never again to go down. And we cherish a perfectly unfaltering faith that the four per cent on those subject to ten days' notice of great conservative party of the country will unmistakahly plaot itself upon the Border State Platform.

It would be chiefly as the promoter and harbinger of this result that we should hail with especial pleasure the selection of Mr. Mallory as the conservative candidate for the Speakership. Yet a fitter man in all other respects cannot be found in the conservative FRESH GOODS ranks of the House. His fitness as a whole is pre-eminent. We are not surprised that the suggestion of his name awakens a responsive echo in so many quarters of the North. The fact is unquestionably a very auspicious one.

Saturday as to the reported project of a rebel raid into Kentucky through Cumberland Gap and perhaps Pound Gap. Such a raid has long been expected both by our loyal and our disloyal citizens to take place as soon as the two conditions of good roads and the desired maturity of the corn harvests should exist. These conditions now exist or will very soon. Goods, selected from full Eastern stocks. We have Of course it is our duty to he on the vigilant lookout for the dash of the foe. We hear of scillties, and now hope to be able to fill all orders guerilla bands prowling and plundering io various counties of our State already, and these are not unlikely to be the forerunners of far more formidable forces.

We can at present see no possible room to doubt the speedy occurrence of an invasiou in considerable force. Gen. Preston, it is known, has been for months at the head of quite a strong hody of troops threatening as from near Ahingdon. Those who know his military experience and character in the rebel Confederacy know that he is not an officer to Confederacy know that he is not an officer to threaten and not do his best to fulfil his PRATHER & SMITH. threats. There is not a more gallant and dashing General than he in the rehcl service, and he is strongly prompted to invade Kentucky and if possible sweep through it not only by the thought that it would seenre to the rebel causo an immense advantage and to himself a large share of the kind of "glory" he covets, hat by the consideration that in this State he has large possessions which he regards himself as having been despoiled of, and which he is burning to recover. We may be assured then that be will strike at the very first opportunity, and it is not easy to conceive that ho can reasonably look for a better opportunity than he has now or will very ahortly have. Gen. Burnside's army bas moved far into Tennessce; the two Kentucky regiments guarding those sections of the State through which Gen. Preston would wish first to pass are about to be disbanded on account. of the expiration of their term of enlistment; and hence this or a period very close at hand would seem to be the very ime that Gen. P. would especially covet. It is therefore our duty to ourselves, as well as to the holy cause to which we have devoted ourselves, to be prepared for danger. We don't see, and we can't learn, what and where Kentucky's defences are, though nnnestionably we should sco and learn much if the emergency were to come. We hear of no adequate Federal forces starting up in the ricinities or sectiona where rebel depredations are committed and rushing to the rescue or to vengeance, and the hrave and patriotic Burnside, whose military rule embraces Kentucky, is, as we have said, hundreds of miles away and in a situation of such vast importance that he can divert no portion of his attention from what is immediately hefore him to what is going on in this State. All his great energies are undoubtedly taxed to the tmost where he is, and hence we must not at present look wholly to his guiding mind and the Army of the Ohio for safety. Would to God we had Gen. Rousseau now in our State at the head of 20,000 mounted infantry. But mere regrets or anxious desires are useless.

the matter.

In times of peril, every man, instead of sbutting both eyes, should prepare to shut one while the other runs along the harrel of a good rifle. We should consider oo portion of Kentucky secure. If John Morgan with four thousand men could dash through a large part of Kentucky, through the whole length of Indiana, and through the whole extent of Ohio, putting all the Indiana and Ohio cities and towns in mortal fear, and at length reaching the Ohio river to be driven back only by the half-accidental presence of Federal gunboats, our people can judge what part or whether any part of our State would he safe if Gen. Preston, a far abler commander than Morgan and at the head of a far larger force than Morgan, were to rush among as upon an errand of conquest and destruction. As for Louisville, she needs the home troops which she had for a few brief days and the fortifications that she never had. The neglect to provide better for the defence of a city so exposed as this, and so important to the government in a strategic view as this, is one of the most extraordinary of all the military phenomena of these most extraordinary times.

Since writing the article above, we have been glad to learn that Gen. Burnside, when he went to Tennessee, left here a sufficient number of veteran troops to render the hody of Kentncky secure against any force that General Preston or any other Confederate Geoeral is at present likely to be able to bring into the State. Our apprehensions are in a great measure allayed, but we will not suppress what we have written, for it perhaps snggests some considerations which the authorities and people would do well to keep in lt is rumored among politicians in Richmond that Robert M. T. Hunter will he sent to Mcxico as the representative of the answers by citing the opinions of Governor | Southern Confederacy, in order to prepare the Bramlette and of several other public men of | way for an offensive and defensive alliance the Border States, with the following resolu- | between the Emperor of that country and the tions adopted manimously by the Legislature | government of Richmood. It is said that this gentleman has received instructions for the Resolved, That it is the deliberate opinion of Kentncky, that the only hope for the restoration of the national Union is upon that great charter of our freedom, the Constitution of the United States. It cannot be accomplished in any other mode. The original State area.

It would certainly be a good joke if tho rehel Cenfederacy, nnrecognized itself by any Power on earth, were to undertake to set up the business of recognition. But the rumor given ahove isn't unlikely.

It is a fact that the leaders of the rebellion have actually appointed a commission in East Tennessee to accompany the agents of the conscription and examine the women to ascertain whether they are not men in disguise. A commission should he appointed to cut open the paunches of such scoundrels and examine their entrails to see whether they have the forms of men inside as well as outside.

A notorious Mississippi guerilla, Col. Amos R. Johnson, has been appointed to the command of such members of John Morgan's old division as are out of the penitontiary. Little did the prophet Amos dream of ever having a horse-thief for a namesake.

A letter-writer denies that Gen. Rosecrans swears. Certainly that gallant officer never swears profanely, but we guess, that, when he knows a man to he a damned "scoundrel, he doesn't long hesitate to say so."

FROM GENERAL ROSECRANS .- The telegraph indicates an attack on Chattanooga yesterday, with every prospect of success by Rosecrans. We hope to be able to announce a victory in to-merrow morning's paper.

OUR CITY HIGH SCHOOLS .- Many of our vious attendance of the Ward schools is a patronize it. prerequisite to admission to the High Schools. This is a mistake. The only conditions are a residence in Louisvillo, or that the parent or gnardian is a tax payer in Louisville, and that the candidate pass a satisfactory examination. Those who wish to enter these schools may yet procure certificates of admission of the Superintendent on Monday morning. Parents who wish further information in regard to the Male Righ School may consult Doctor Grant, the Principal, at his office in the college building, corner of Ninth and Chestnut streets. In the absence of Principal Chase, of the Female lligh School, Prof. Hailman will represent him at the Female High School.

The public schools in this city will open on Monday morning. The school heretofore occupying the premises on the corner of Main and Seventeenth streets has been removed to the south side of Market street, between Soventeenth and Eighteenth, in the building owned by Mr. Bollinger, All the other schools will retain the same buildings they had last session. The military nnthorities expect to give up the public school houses now occupied by them as hospitals in the course of four or By weeks. The schools, the ensuing year, will be under the charge of the following experienced and successful educators: Fulton street school, Mr. W. H. Bartholo

First Ward school, Mr. Hiram W. Roberts. Second Ward school, Mr. Geo. E. Roberts. Third Ward school, Mr. S. P. Browder. Fonrth Ward school, Mr. Chas. W. Sewell. Fifth Ward school, Mr. James McBurnie. Seventh Ward school, Mr. Geo. D. Sherwin. Eighth Ward school, Mr. W. H. Hubbard. Iligh street school, Mr. Jesse W. Tuell. Shippingport school, Mr. John W. West. Pland school, Mr. Henry K. Roberts.

WOOD'S THEATRE- The Holman Troupe .-These popular artists are re-engaged for six nights more, and will appear this evening in Balte's beautiful opera of the Bohemian Girl. We have never seen the flolmans in this opera, but if the papers of other cities are any guide, we shall certainly have an opportunity for enjoying a great musical feast. This piece was performed by them for six consecutive nights to dense and fashionable audiences in Cincinnati, Miss Sallie surpassing all her former fame in her rendition of the role of Ailine. We remember with pleasure the beautiful melodies, "I dreamt that I dwelt in Marble Halls," "When other Lips," "The Heart bowed Down," and "The Fair Land of Poland," besides the superb Gipsy chornses, all of which will be given this evening, and will bring to mind the happy days gone by. Wo bespeak a full house for this popular troupe.

THE FAIR GROUNDS .- We pessed Saturday afternoon at this delightful resort, and were old look of beauty and comfort. Floral Hall has been elegantly refitted, and florists are at work decorating it with evergreens, while the taste of Mr. Lawrence Young will be directed in the preparation of the tables for fruit and vegetable display. The amphitheatre and the race-course have been relaid and rolled so that they will both be in excellent order. Power Hall, under the able superintendence of Mr. William Lennox, will offer every desirable advantage for the showing of all kinds of machinery. The Fnir Grounds should terminate the evening drive of our citizens during the week, that they may witness the preparations for the State Fair, which commences to-morrow week.

TRIED TO ESCAPE .- Thos. Rice, of the Sixtyninth Indiann, was convicted of horse-stealing at Ruckport, Ind., and sentenced to four vears' imprisonment in the Jeffersonville Penitentiary. He was put on board the Hetty Gilmore, in charge of the Sheriff, but when at a point twelve miles below New Albany, although handcuffed, he jumped overboard into the river and struck out for the shore. The Sheriff took the Gilmore's yawl and started after him, ordering him to halt, which order met with refusal. The officer shot at him without effect. He was captured, however, a few hundred yards from the shore, and brought up to the Prisox, where he will doubtes serve out his time.

LOUISVILLE THEATRE. - Miss Charlot'o Thompson, the talented young actress, whose personations last season attracted so much attention, commences an engagement this eveng, appearing as Pauline, in Bulwer's Lady rons. She has Little Barefoot, Clouds have Silver Linizgs, and other novelties in attention of his friends and the public gener preparation, and we hope she will play a sucpreparation, and we hope she will play a successful engagement. Manager Fuller has gone to the eastward to secure artists in place of some who have shamefully broken their engagements. - In the meantime Mr and Mrs. Vanderen, Mr. McManus and other old favoritcs will appear temporarily.

The Medical Department of the University of Louisville will open its session on the first Monday in October, which will continue four months. This will be the twentyseventh annual session of the Department, and the national reputation which it has acquired and the large number of its graduates living n all portions of the country, are the best arguments to be applied in its behalf now. We look confidently for no further disturbing elements to interrupt our social or educational

We have received several communic ations in reference to the unfortunate shooting of Captain Murphy by Lieut.-Col. Spalding, but must decline their publication. The statement which we have already given on the anthority of Lieutenant-Colonel Watts, will of course be submitted to a court of inquiry, and we have no doubt that ample justice will be rendered by that tribunal both to the living and the dead.

Col. S. D. Bruce, of the Twentieth Kentneky, passed through our city on a hrief visit to his home in Lexington, after a long and laborious service as commandant of the post of Clarksville, Tenn., a position of great delicacy which he has managed to the entire satisfaction of Gen. Rosecrans, as expressed in frequent reports. The many friends of Col. Bruce will be gratified to learn that his health is excellent.

THE BOARD OF TRADE .- We hope every ember of this association will lay aside all other business to attend the adjourned meeting to-morrow night, at which subjects of vital interest will be discussed and no doubt de-

Dar Ouartermaster-General Meigs is expected here to-day or to-morrow, for the purpose of an extensive observation of the condinecessities of the various military is in the Departments of the Uhio and the Cumberland.

YUNG MEN, TAKE PARTIOULAR NOTICE.—

Dr. H devotes much of his time to the treatment of those cases caused by a secret habit which ruins both body and mind, unfitting the unfortunate individual for either business or society. The sad effects of these early habits, or the excess of ripsr years, are to weaken and deblifate the constitution, destroy the physical and mental powers, diminish and sufeable the natural feelings, and exhaust the vital energies of manbood: be preasures of life are marred, the object of marriaga frustrated, and existence itself rendered a term of uncessing misery and regrot. Such persons, especially those contemplating marriage, should been to time in making immediate application, as Dr. H., by his new treatment, is enabled to secure a speedy and permanent cure.
